Catch a front-row seat as Tuck, the "Extreme Treasure Hunter," flies by the seat of his pants across the globe, in search and acquisition of museum-level rare, one-of-a-kind cultural treasures and artifacts. He searches for these rare finds on behalf of private institutions, private buyers and for his own cache of international treasures that will be part of Tuck's soon-to-open museum, located at the edge of Mammoth Cave, one of the eight greatest wonders of the world, in Cave City, Kentucky.

Tuck also highlights each and every treasured artifact from his cool cabin on "Tuck's Treasures" shows, explaining the where, what, how, when and why 7,000-year-old Stone Age artifacts were uncovered from his ancient dig site, where his discoveries have been deemed "the most historically groundbreaking artifacts of that era." The show also explores one-of-a-kind discoveries, from modern Beatles memorabilia to Qing and Ming dynasty treasures, plus other museum-caliber treasures around the globe. Every show is a must-see!

Tuck, a world-renowned treasure hunter, lives and loves each and every hunt, and viewers follow his searches and finds as they happen—from negotiating and acquiring major treasure finds to convincing private elite collectors to unlock their vaults to searching through caves, mountains, archaeological dig sites.

This real-life show series is a group like none other. It's exhilarating, interesting and historic in nature. It explores the outrageous costs and obstacles Tuck encounters while searching for his treasures. Tuck also practices what he preaches, which is to "Never, Never, Never Give Up" and to "Fall Down 7, Stand Up 8." Kentuckyana Jones filmed all three series' shows independently, with a limited budget, iPhone 7-plus videos, and usually a one- or two-person crew, at times including Tuck filming himself selfie-style. The episodes were often filmed with phones taped to ladders, trees and rocks. It's an insane, zany, and entertaining reality show.

Follow Tuck's roller coaster treasure ride as he negotiates, barbers and fights to secure major exhibits for his upcoming museum. Watch as he secures agreements with the direct descendants of the infamous Hatfields and McCoys, Kentucky moonshiners, and owners of military artifacts.

Tuck's project that has been near and dear to his heart has been to honor and support our nation's finest, our veterans, through the Veterans Soil Project mission and show series.
